February 2016

Hello readers,

Happy holidays. We've got a big issue this month with lots of suggestions for a romantic getaway. You did remember that February is Valentines Day, didn't you?

Since many places book up for Valentines Day itself, we like to consider the entire winter as perfect for romantic getaways. Besides, anticipation is next best thing to actually going.

This month we are all about travel. We've been reviewing some great tech and photo gadgets, so there will be lots of them in the next issue; but, this month, let's make the best of winter and make it the time for a romantic getaway.

Our feature destinations this month are three of the most romantic places we've enjoyed: Alaska, Hawaii and New England. All the fun starts on page four. Enjoy yourselves and be sure to send a post card.

We want this publication to be a great resource for seniors out there and we'd love to hear about what topics you'd like to see covered. Drop us a line and let us know.

Please enjoy this issue; but, better yet subscribe and we'll drop you a note when each month's issue is ready. Have a great month - and get up and go somewhere!

TRAVEL TO HAWAII WITH THE WHOLE FAMILY

By Doug Bardwell

Multigenerational travel is becoming more and more popular...and with good reason. It's a chance for kids, parents and grandparents to relax and enjoy each other's company in new and fun settings. Away from the dishes, the trash that needs to be taken out and that room that needs to be cleaned, all generations can do what they like and create new memories.

So where would you go if you had two weeks with the whole clan? How about Hawaii? As America's 50th state, it's one that most American's have never visited. That's a shame, as it is arguably one of the most interesting and beautiful of all. So let's imagine a two-week itinerary and see how this sounds. Checking with Kayak, I found fares are almost half the cost if you fly into Oahu as opposed to flying directly to the big island or Maui. Once you arrive in Oahu, which you'll want to see anyhow, you can fly or sail to the other islands very inexpensively. Before you make reservations, check the media and festival guide available on the Oahu website, as there's nothing worse than missing a big event by a day or two when you could have planned otherwise. It might be a movie fest, fireworks, book fest or a music event – there are things for all interests. When thinking of accommodations, there are all sorts of possibilities as well. Consider renting a home instead of staying at a hotel. Checking on www.VRBO.com (Vacation Rentals By Owner) I see a 3 bedroom, 3 bath, sleeps 10 home with views of the ocean and Diamond Head for as little as $390 per night. At $39 per person per night, you'd pay that much at the local hostel.

Hawaii is not an inexpensive destination, and cooking a few of your own meals (especially breakfast) could save hundreds of dollars. Usually kids are happy with cereal, so save your money for other more expensive attractions later in the day. Renting a car is also something to consider. If you are happy to spend all day, every day at the same beach, forget it; but if you'd like to take in the sights, a car is a definite advantage. I can't stay still, so I'm off and exploring after one day at the beach. Here would be my bucket list while on the isle of Oahu: Waikiki Beach You haven't been to Hawaii if you don't spend some time on Waikiki Beach. Make sure to get Diamond Head in the background when you are taking your 'selfies'. Thousands of shops and restaurants line Kalakaua Avenue, just beyond the beach, so you'll never be far from food and sustenance. Some hotels lining the beach have patios where it's great to have dinner and drinks and watch the sun go down. Good places to hang out would include the Hilton Hawaiian Village Beach Resort (whether you stay there or not). I've stayed here four times and loved it each time. The Atlantis submarine departs from here if you want a "down-under" view of Hawaii.

A mile or two from Waikiki is Aloha Tower Marketplace which is where most of the other boat tours start. You can go whale watching, snorkeling, take a cultural cruise or a dinner cruise from here on the Starlet.

Pearl Harbor is a must. The pre-tour videos and narration are well done and the visit to the floating memorial above the USS Arizona is quite moving. Heading across the island, you'll find the Dole Plantation. Fun stop for kids with a twenty minute train ride through the plantation. My biggest disappointment in Hawaii was buying a small tub of pineapple pieces from their gift shop and finding that they had been doused with preservatives. Drive all the way to the northwest corner of the island if you want to see big waves. The North Shore is famous for the surf and this is where most of the surfing competitions take place. The biggest surf is typically in the winter. Follow the ocean highway to the southeast tip of the island and you'll pass Kaneohe Bay, lighthouses, Asian temples, blowholes, and finally arrive at Diamond Head. Go ahead and hike the path to the top. Anyone can do it. I followed a little Japanese teenager in stiletto heels, so I sure wasn't complaining in my tennis shoes. The view from the top is beautiful.

I'd allow five or six full days to enjoy Oahu and then catch a boat or plane to Maui. Maui has twice the natural beauty of Oahu and is nowhere near as touristy. Resorts and condo's line Maui's western shore with beautiful views of the sunset, but you'll find much cheaper accommodations further east along the north shore. Along the west coast, Lahaina is an old whaling town where it's worth spending some time. A huge banyan tree, a nice city park, a Buddhist temple and more can all be fun. The Old Lahaina Luau seems to be popular here as well. Reservations needed. I love driving, and there are few roads I won't travel, so taking the ultimate road trip along Maui's north coast was something I really looked forward to. It's not for the faint of heart, but the views are phenomenal.

It's called the Road to Hana and there's even a narrated audio tour that you can play as you drive for great background and history of the area. In the first 30 miles past the city, there are 600 curves and 54 one-lane bridges. You'll pass Hana's black sand beach, and more beautiful lookouts than you can count. It's about a 3.5 hour trip one way, so many people spend the night in Hana before returning. I left early in the morning and made it back shortly after dark, but I honestly felt rushed. Drive just a little way past Hana to the Ohe'o Pools with a series of seven cascading pools that eventually flow out to the ocean. Very cool to see and only a short hike from the parking area. At this point you better turn around and head back. Rental car contracts forbid driving further into the unpaved national park area. Another day's adventure can be had by driving to the top of Haleakala – a now dormant volcano that extends past the clouds. A hundred brave souls usually can be found driving to the top each morning to watch the sun rise above the clouds which typically circle the crater in the early morning hours. WARNING! If you are going, take your winter jacket, hat and gloves. Seriously. Even in summer, it is mighty windy and freezing cold at this 10,023 foot elevation. Trust me on this. Want to go even higher? A highlight of my last trip there was a "doors-off" helicopter trip with Alex Air. They routinely fly two different tours with the opportunity to get great photos and views of the island and it's waterfalls. They also have craft with doors on if you aren't that adventurous. This slide show is their most popular tour of west Maui and the island of Molokai. The island is loaded with beautiful beaches, waterfalls, marvelous hiking and quaint seafood restaurants all over the island, so check near where ever you decide to stay for the best choices close to you. Give yourself a day to return your car, catch a flight back to Oahu and catch your returning flight. Hopefully this has been the trip of a lifetime for all generations. (Disclaimer: This article was originally written in 2014, so please double check prices mentioned. Most likely they have changed since then.)

ALASKA

Anchorage

Anchorage Getaway Ideas

Anchorage and Southcentral Alaska are romantic year-round, particularly for the adventurer. Whether fat-tire biking, cross-country skiing or snowshoeing on the trails in and around Anchorage, enjoying an exquisitely prepared meal at a local restaurant, enjoying a walk through downtown and coffee as you take in a sunset, winter in Alaska is magical. Check out www.Anchorage.net/winter.

Anchorage is ready for you, 12 months a year

By Doug Bardwell

Anchorage, Alaska's largest city, with more than 40 percent of the state's population, is a unique metropolitan city. Less than 500 miles from the Arctic Circle, Anchorage still enjoys reasonably moderate temperatures and is blessed with beautiful natural surroundings; set between Cook Inlet and the rugged Chugach Mountains. It's one of only 11 cities to have been awarded the All-American City designation four or more times.

You'll most likely fly into Ted Stevens International Airport, and from there it's a 15-minute ride into downtown. If you are cruising, you'll probably dock at Whittier or Seward. Seward is about 2-1/2 hours away and Whittier is about 1-1/2 hours.

The Alaska Railroad operates between Seward and Anchorage and is a not-to-be-missed ride if Seward is in your plans. Views of wildlife and glaciers, along with ultra-comfortable "Adventure Class" coach cars make for a great trip. Or splurge and get the giant viewing windows of the two-decker "GoldStar Dome" cars with their fine dining options.

Like most other metropolitan cities, there is the official visitor center downtown – at the corner of 4th Avenue and F Street. It's a great place to start with brochures, maps poles, woolly mammoth tusk, moon rock and touch tank with Alaskan sea-stars and crabs.

Consider the Alaska Culture Pass where you get two admissions for one price including a shuttle from one to the other. The Alaska Native Heritage Center honors native culture and traditions with inside and outside exhibits. Experience storytelling, song, dance and artist demonstrations.

Try an Alaskan Trolley Tour where you can hop on and hop off as the mood moves you. With a city so big, they'll help you see the most and suggestions for whatever type adventure you seek.

Not far away is the Anchorage Museum with interesting exhibits all year long. Alaskans don't hunker down in the winter time, so expect something interesting to always be available at the museum. There are four major permanent exhibits – the Alaskan Gallery, Art of the North, Smithsonian Arctic Studies Center and the Imaginarium Discovery Center with its 80 hands-on exhibits. Kids will love the totem important sights and maybe point out a moose or two. Or, if you are a do-it-yourselfer at heart, consider renting a bike and trying out the three-trail, 36-mile bike circuit of greenways.

Anchorage is definitely one city where you'll wish you budgeted more time. From the outdoor adventure to the indoor discoveries, the opportunities are as big as the state. You'll just have to come back more than once. For more information on Anchorage, check out www.Anchorage.net

United Airlines fined for lack of aid to disabled

United was smacked with recent fines totalling $2.75 million for failing to provide timely assistance to disabled passengers as well as other tarmac delay violations.

Five of its hub airports were cited in United's failure to return wheelchairs to the gates in a timely manner and failing to give "adequate assistance" to disabled travelers.

National Wildlife Refuges Announce Fee-Free Days for 2016

Head outdoors and enjoy some of the country's most magical places — America's national wildlife refuges offer unparalleled opportunities to experience the great outdoors and see a rich diversity of wildlife in beautiful natural settings. If that wasn't enticement enough, refuges that normally charge entrance fees will offer an additional incentive—free admission on these days in 2016:

- January 18 – Martin Luther King, Jr. Day
- February 13-15 – Presidents' Day Weekend
- September 24 – National Public Lands Day
- October 9 – First Sunday of National Wildlife Refuge Week
- November 11-13 – Veterans Day weekend

Major airlines to start competing with bargain carriers on price

With Spirit, Frontier and Allegiant grabbing a good percentage of the "bargain shopper" market, larger airlines are feeling the heat and pledging to fight back.

United was the latest to announce that like American and Delta, they will be introducing a "no frills" bargain fare level by end of year.

Details were not released, but expect less flexibility, no assigned seats and no refunds for the lower fares.
